*I woke up this morning with my father on my mind <3
For those who knew him - he was quiet, kind and cooler than the other side of the pillow. He never complained and he was very self-sufficient. He loved his daughters, his entire family near and far, he talked about serving in the "Nam" war and some of those experiences, he made it home to have a family of his own ... which included bonus daughters and bonus grandchildren <3 My dad was loved very much from his entire family and notoriously known for his favorite saying "Oh Wow!" This last year has been rough for him; losing his sisters almost two months apart and then then falling ill himself. He never wanted to give up on this fight because of his strength, pride, nobility and the love for his entire family. But Daddy - we knew your strength and the doctors knew it too - but God knew best on Monday Dec 5th; The Battle is no longer yours; you gave God all the glory (amen); We all love you very much, we'll cherish all of the memories and lessons, and we will forever miss you! #loveprevails*
