Imagine cooking a hot meal for your family, cleaning your home, taking your kids to school, and dialing your family just to make sure they started their day right. That was our mother. All that may sound like a handful to many of us, but to her it was a duty that she was more than happy to fulfill.

Life wasn't always kind to her. Like all of us, she struggled, even when the rain poured nonstop, each drop splashing harder than the last. Even so, in her eyes, so long as her family was seeing a bright blue sky and rainbows, so was she.

And one day, she finally did. We helped her get the home of her dreams in the grassy, rolling hills of Georgia. Yes, there are horses there. And cows. And roosters. It wasn't all that different than where she was raised in Enriquillo. And that was perfect.

Her hours long, and I mean hours long of conversations on her white Samsung smartphone were filled not with her worries of family, but instead of wonder. Not a single day went by where she didn't talk of her likewise white and beige adorned home; always asking family to come and witness what she finally made. And for those who were coming to our Thanksgiving, paper balls thrown through the window were waiting for you.

...That didn't come to pass. Plans are made, but time makes its plans on its own schedule. And that schedule is made and known to only God himself.
