“ Madeline was a sister to me. We met in second grade at St. Patrick’s School and remained friends throughout our lives. Madeline taught me to see the positive side of things, to believe in goodness and occasionally throw caution to the wind to have a good time. I love her with all my heart and will miss her every single day for the rest of my life.

*With love,
Linda*

“ I met Madeline over a decade ago, when we were both flying back from London. We randomly started talking as we settled into the flight and clicked. But that's who she was. She had such a wide range of friends and interests. In the early days she was always doing and going someplace, and after the accident she struggled to keep things up, but was always trying and hoping for more. She wanted to be well and longed for the days she'd be able to dash off again on the spur of the moment.

Since that time, I've shared meals, movies, books, conversations, good times, moving apartments, birthdays, and talk about families and beliefs and surviving and spoons and ways to get stronger. Her family--particularly her parents and nieces and nephews--were at the heart of who she was.

I know she'll be greatly missed by her family, but her creativity, generosity, spirit, kindness and eagerness to be helpful by connection people and interests will be missed by everyone who knew her. Especially me.

My thoughts and prayers are with all the family and friends who will feel that hole.
