

Sean Michael Misciagna

December 18, 1978 - November 15, 2015

On the morning of November 15, 2015, Dr. Sean Michael Misciagna passed away in the arms of his husband after a valiant seven month battle against brain cancer. Sean was 36 years old. Sean was born December 18, 1978. Sean's generosity and ambition drove him to attend the prestigious academic institutes of Chaminade High School, Fordham University, and the Albert Einstein College of Medicine. Sean was certified by the American Board of Family Medicine and spent his career as a physician with WestMed Medical Group. The members of "Team Sean" will remember Sean as the caring, intelligent, generous, funny, strong, and all around wonderful man he was. His passions included enjoying the successes of his cousins T.J. and Kevin and his children, Melanie and Andrew; spending time with his husband traveling, attending special events, and bonding at home; and fundraising [MD1] [MB2] for the Brain Tumor Society. Sean is survived by his loving husband Joel Braverman; his daughter Melanie Braverman; his son Andrew Braverman; his cousins T.J. and Kevin Brennan, both whom Sean saw as brothers; and his Uncle Tommy Brennan. “ *Dear Joel, Melanie, Andrew, and family,
I first met Sean as an eager medical student doing a rotation on RD.
As his supervising resident, I found him enthusiastic, reliable, and receptive to feedback. In addition, his good nature and great sense of humor had us all laughing despite the difficult work. When he joined our residency program, we were delighted. We worked together at Montefiore for several years until I left to come to San Jose. I was glad to see that he married, had children, and had the opportunity to touch many more lives with his wonderful spirit.
He will be missed.
May your wonderful memories sustain you during this difficult time.
Fondly,

“ I had the privilege of attending Fordham with Sean. He was an absolutely brilliant guy and an even better person. May he RIP. I send my deepest sympathy and condolences to his family and friend.
